

Economy Fidelity

OVERVIEW:

Having fidelity in your school's economy is vital to the success of PBIS implementation. Luckily, each person in the school takes part in ensuring the the economy is balanced and maintained. Setting and adhering to Daily Point Goals, school and classroom store prices, and event and raffle prices are crucial to developing and maintaining your school's economy. By aligning these, and creating economic fidelity, you will see a positive buy-in from staff and students.

CREATING HABITS:

We get it... creating a new habit is difficult! However, we know that with a splash of intention, you will be well on your way to meeting Daily Point Goals and doing your part to maintain your school's economy.

If you need help getting started, check out these suggestions:

Keep the PBIS Rewards app pulled up on your phone or tablet. Also, include PBIS Rewards into your morning login routine. Login to the desktop app when you login for the day to take attendance & other morning tasks.

Identify a particular expectation each week that you will focus on. Focusing on a single expectation will feel less overwhelming and help you be intentional in your observations.

Choose 3 parts of the day you will reward.

EXAMPLES:

As students place their phone in a designated area before class, in the line to lunch, when students are turning in homework, during individual worktime, during cleanup time, etc.

DRIVING HOME THE POINT:

When students are not receiving enough points, they may feel the reward structures are out of reach. This can cause them to lose interest and the desire to work to meet expectations.

Likewise, if students are receiving too many points, they are likely being rewarded too abundantly. They will begin to see that they do not have to challenge themselves to be rewarded.
